

This section notates the number of confidential advisors and responsible employees within the campus community. The confidential advisor primarily serves to aid a student involved in a power-based violence or sexual misconduct complaint in the resolution process as a confidential resource. As suggested by the term "confidential advisor", confidential communication with the advisor will be kept confidential in all circumstances except where the institution or advisor may be required to disclose the communication under state law and federal laws. A responsible employee receives a direct statement regarding or witnesses an incident of power-based violence. Responsible employees do not include an employee designated as a Confidential Advisor pursuant to R.S. 17:3399.15(B) or an employee who has privileged communications with a student as provided by law. Southeastern Louisiana University currently has confidential advisors.

Peter Emerson
Annette Baldwin – Newton
Paige LeBleu
Courtney Williams
Marcela Spicuzza
Wes Errington
Kayleigh Underwood
Dalina Dahlmans
Mauricio Salazar
Randi Ditta

Per the legislation, training is required for all responsible employees and confidential advisors. An initial training covering updated regulations took place in August 2021. All Title IX personnel and confidential advisors participated in the training. The Board of Regents has developed a training made available to all responsible employees as of January 2022. Southeastern Louisiana University utilizes the "Moodle" Learning Management System to deliver this training (annually). As of October 9, 2023– 91% of all responsible employees have completed the training. This is reflected in the chart below.

There were no reports within these three categories

